Aims

To introduce the principles of play and spontaneity as they relate to the processes of musical theatre performing, and the work of relevant practitioners;
To encourage students to develop a level of freedom of imagination and body/voice expressivity through the use of theatre games;
To introduce methods of using play/improvisation both as a rehearsal tool and as a way of creating performance material.

Learning Outcomes

After completing the module the student should be able to:

- 1 Work effectively as a member of an ensemble in applying games and imaginative spontaneity in rehearsal and performance;
- 2 Articulate the principles of play and improvisation as part of working dialogue in studio/rehearsal room practice.

Learning Outcomes of Assessments

The assessment item list is assessed via the learning outcomes listed:

Continuous assessment 1 2

Outline Syllabus

Using a range of theorists and practitioners, week by week a range of games and techniques will be explored both as a means of supporting work on text in rehearsal and as a way of creating material. In particular, it explores what the concepts of play and spontaneity mean when framed within the musical structures of song and dance.

Learning Activities

Tutorials and Workshops

The class is taught primarily through practical workshops, including time for reflection and evaluation of learning at the end of practical work.

Notes

An exploration of the use of play and the concept of spontaneity as part of working process and in performance.

Students are expected to wear suitable rehearsal clothing and footwear as outlined in the Drama Department Handbook, and to equip themselves with personal recording equipment for musical and voice work.
