Aims and Outcomes

Aims	To provide opportunity for students to consolidate and nurture acting skills through research, rehearsal and performance To identify practical and cognitive strategies for performing a text To recognise the provenance of an extant text within a cultural/historical context
-------------	--

Learning Outcomes

After completing the module the student should be able to:

Code	Description
MLO1	Identify and utilise a range of rehearsal and performance skills
MLO2	Articulate the connection between research, process and product in respect of and through performance
MLO3	Evaluate their own work and that of the group in the specific context of rehearsal and performance

Module Content

Outline Syllabus
This module consolidates and develops aspects of voice, movement, acting and production skills already introduced through rehearsal leading to performance of extant text. Students will be set research tasks relevant to production and are expected to complete the 'Actor's homework' in preparation for context time in workshop/rehearsal. This leads to performance which is an opportunity for students to experience and subsequently evaluate how the constituent elements of the performance mode affect the process as developed on the rehearsal floor.

Module Overview
This practical workshop based module consolidates and develops aspects of voice, movement, acting and production skills already introduced through rehearsal, leading to the performance of an extant text. The opportunity to consolidate and nurture acting skills through research, rehearsal and performance will be provided, alongside practical and cognitive strategies for performing a text.

Additional Information

This is a practical workshop based-module, which is led by a staff director. It will culminate in a workshop production of extant script material, -usually, but not necessarily, from a single play – focusing on building and consolidating rehearsal process and acting skills. Student should wear appropriate rehearsal clothing as advised by their project director.
