Outline Syllabus

Definitions of management, leadership and culture in organizations. Observation and reflection of differing organizational structures, business systems and operations within the private, public and not-for-profit sectors. Introduction to the interdependency of the management functions of operations, planning/project management, service design, marketing, human resource management and basic finance.

Learning Activities

Lectures, seminars, case studies and presentations.

Notes

This module aims to provide the students with the ability to identify and reflect on management, leadership styles and culture in all types of organizations and the fact that they are interdependent. It gives an overview of all the functional areas (operations, human resource management, marketing and finance) including service design and project working. Evidence from this module may contribute to WoW certification.
