After completing the module the student should be able to:

Learning Outcomes

Code	Number	Description
MLO1	1	Comprehend fundamental strategies in textual analysis, contextualisation and utilisation of a practical vocabulary across different media
MLO2	2	Employ the core principles of naturalistic technique, considering psycho-physical methodologies
MLO3	3	Identify collaborative working methods, adaptation to group dynamics and recognition of practical solutions
MLO4	4	Examine the relationship between theoretical approaches and its practical application
MLO5	5	Distinguish practitioner approaches in the realisation of character and scene according to performance mediums

Module Content

Outline Syllabus	Initial investigations will focus on detailed examinations of practitioner techniques, alongside classes that identify the importance of improvisation, freedom and play through imagination, loss of self-consciousness, individual and group exercises. Specific practitioners studied include Constantin Stanislavski, Michael Chekhov and Sanford Meisner, with influence from additional 21st Century exponents of The System. You will apply learned principles and techniques in the practical realisation of a psychologically driven, naturalistic contemporary text. You will consolidate and evidence this understanding in a practitioner study, examining your discoveries and application of the technical principles of acting across differing media platforms. Selected material of study will reflect a consideration of diversity and equality concerning gender, age, religion, class, disability and ethnicity.
