Module Overview	This module incorporates some of the module aims and learning outcomes previously pursued and assessed on 4100ENGL Reading English, and incorporates some of its syllabus, with an increased focus on assisting students with developing core writing skills and informed use of the vocabulary required in critical writing. This new aspect is pursued in a model inspired by Raymond Williams's classic book Keywords (1976), with its articulation of the complex and embedded histories of the words ordinarily used in literary and cultural criticism. Many projects in contemporary English studies continue to show the influence of this well-established model. Raymond Williams, Keywords: A Vocabulary of Culture and Society (1976) Julian Wolfreys, Critical Keywords in Literary and Cultural Theory (Palgrave, 2004) Tony Bennett et al, New Keywords: a Revised Vocabulary of Culture and Society (Blackwell, 2005) Colin MacCabe and Holly Yanacek, Keywords for Today (Oxford UP, 2018), and the Keywords Project online: https://keywords.pitt.edu/index.html This module includes among its indicative texts Jamaica Kincaid's A Small Place (1988); any syllabus replacement will also be carefully chosen to represent the global diversity of contemporary writing in English.
