Aims

This module aims to provide students with the resources and knowledge to optimise opportunities provided in the workplace to plan and implement their project to meet the health and social needs of their population.

Notes

This module provides participants with the knowledge and skills to critically plan, undertake and evaluate their own public health projects in the community. For students on the BSc Public Health (Environment) the food practical examination is a compulsory component of the module. Students must pass both the course work and examination elements of the module in order to pass the module.
