Outline Syllabus

The social construction of crime

The aims and values of the criminal justice process in England and Wales
The various stages of criminal justice from policing to punishment

The impact of the criminal justice process

Learning Activities

Lectures: large group sessions in which all students will receive key information on the issues covered related to the module including what is crime, and key contemporary issues with regard to the police, courts and punishment.

Self study: students will be expected to undertake self study and wider reading outside of lectures. This is in order to get the most out of lectures, to prepare for the assessment and to reach their full potential in this module.

Notes

This module is designed for students studying criminal justice and students studying forensic psychology or LLB Law alongside criminal justice modules. The module aims to explore the criminal justice process in England and Wales. Areas to be examined include: police powers, including the power to stop and search; crime control and due process models of policing; sentencing and punishment. The role of determining contexts such as class, race and gender will be an integral part of the module. Students will be introduced to the issue of theory, policy and practice.
