Outline Syllabus

Drawing on the expertise of curators and gallery education officers, this module examines current museological and curatorial debates. Curatorial practice will be understood to cover aspects of curation, exhibition management, education and widening participation. The logistical, practical and conceptual considerations of constructing an exhibition will be examined through past and current examples within the context of local institutions.

Taking historical and contemporary examples the module typically covers: the history of collecting; systems of classification; Museum and Gallery Architecture; Exhibition Design; the temporary and travelling exhibition; the Politics of Space; the role of the curator; 'Visual Literacy' and Audience Development.

Learning Activities

Lectures, seminars and field visits are augmented by the expertise of museum professionals from arts organizations on Merseyside. In collaboration with Tate Liverpool, Liverpool Biennial and other organizations this module includes talks from professional curators, practical demonstrations of curatorial work and the opportunity to develop an exhibition proposal with appropriate curators.

Notes

This module provides students with practical experience of curating and with contact with curatorial specialists from within the industry. Students also learn about the history of museums, galleries and collecting processes.
