Additional Information	Death is an event for the dying person and is likely to cause great anxiety as people consider the inevitability of their mortality. Palliative care is now recognised as an intervention that has the potential to contrive conditions under which we can achieve a meaningful and dignified death, and also to reduce some fears about death and dying. In recent years there has been a general move towards offering generalist palliative care in care settings such as secondary care, care homes, primary care and prisons in which generalist staff are supported by palliative care specialists. 1.
