Reducing knife crime What constitutes a firearms incident Role of the NDM in firearms incidents Building trust - with the vulnerable e.g. homeless people, missing persons The 'pack mentality' and the actions of organised low-level crime syndicates Recording police action on social media How to increase police visibility and accessibility to the public Radicalisation and perceptions of the effectiveness of the 'prevent' strategy Impact of social and political change upon response policing How response policing adapts to reduced resources and financial constraints Analysing and reporting on issues such as: • Current policing awareness of social/community issues • Cultural/socio-political influences and change PEEL reports into police effectiveness Reforms required to enable the police service to fulfil its primary functions Potential impact of resourcing demands on policing: • Doing more with less money and fewer officers • Increasing and different demands e.g. mental health and social issues, technical/digital crime, extremism • Staffing levels, abstractions and availability • Maintaining morale when faced with extent and pace of change How response policing can deal with challenges posed by issues of resourcing How personal pressures generated by response policing can be alleviated: • Personal time management - balancing efficiency and effectiveness with professionalism and stress • Being proactive to help prevent or reduce crime and disorder • Personal coping strategies, including formal channels of support

Module Overview

The module is intended to ensure that you have the knowledge, understanding and skills to conduct more complex investigations in a Response Policing context. You will review the evidence base in this area and research how to implement and develop practical solutions to provide effective policing methods in this area whilst furthering your own competence within the pathway.

Additional Information

Each of the Pathways are specified by the PSRB and the employing force. This module will sit alongside the research project and ensure the student has the required knowledge. It is not a research project in itself.

All assessed components on this module must be successfully passed for credit to be released.
