Learning Outcomes

After completing the module the student should be able to:

Code	Description
MLO1	produce a rigorous piece of primary research in a human resource related area.
MLO2	decide an appropriate methodology to test hypotheses
MLO3	critically compare theory drawn from academic contribution in the literature review and student's own primary research.
MLO4	develop a discussion in which it is expected that students draw out the contradictions, nuances and tensions between theory and practice; culminating in developing new theoretical contributions and speculating on areas for future research.

Module Content

Outline Syllabus
action research workshop style groups covering: aims, research objectives, literature reviews, methods, methodology, critical analysis and discussion, areas for future research and development.

Module Overview
This module aims to develop an independent, academically rigorous research project using primary research methods, with a methodology and full literature review. It will culminate in a critical, analytical discussion, drawing out further areas for exploration, potential new theoretical contributions to your chosen subject, and recommendations for future academic research in your chosen area.

Additional Information

the workshops cover the basics of how to become a proficient researcher, testing out group members' hypotheses and bringing in current theory and academic contribution.
