Module Content

Outline Syllabus	This module will examine violence as a public health issue from different disciplinary perspectives. It will include an introduction to the epidemiological principles related to understanding violence, followed by a critical examination of key aspects of violence, including: genocide, gender based violence, child and elder abuse, youth violence, self-directed violence, and ethical and advocacy issues.
Module Overview	This module critically examines a range of key issues relating to violence and health from international, national and local perspectives. It demonstrates the need for an interdisciplinary public health approach when addressing the causes of violence, building prevention control strategies, and promoting safety. It enables you to understand and develop strategies to control violence.
Additional Information	While violence is not a new health concern, it has increasingly come on the public health agenda. The impact of violence on the health of individuals, families and the wider society adds to an increasing burden of ill-health and cost to health and other welfare services. The module critically examines a range of key issues related to violence and health from international, national and local perspectives. It demonstrates the need for an interdisciplinary public health approach when addressing the causes of violence, building prevention control strategies, and promoting safety.
