

Warning: An incomplete or missing proforma may have resulted from system verification processing

Title: Going Global: Activists, Movements, and the Making of Modern Internationalism, 1830s-1930s
Status: Definitive
Code: 7106MHIST (127248)
Version Start Date: 01-08-2021

Owning School/Faculty: Humanities and Social Science
Teaching School/Faculty: Humanities and Social Science

Team	Leader
Andre Keil	Y

Academic Level: FHEQ7 Credit Value: 30 Total Delivered Hours: 39
Total Learning Hours: 300 Private Study: 261

Delivery Options

Course typically offered: Semester 1

Component	Contact Hours
Off Site	6
Workshop	33

Grading Basis: 50 %

Assessment Details

Category	Short Description	Description	Weighting (%)	Exam Duration
Report	AS1	Book review (2000-words)	25
Presentation	AS3	Oral presentation	25
Essay	AS2	Essay (5,000-words)	50

Aims

To provide students with specialist knowledge about the concept and history of internationalism in its various contexts.

To provide students with an extensive knowledge of inter- and transnational history of the period between 1830 and 1930 and the methods and concepts that underpin it.

To provide students with extensive knowledge from cogent fields of study, such as Political Science and International Relations

Learning Outcomes

After completing the module the student should be able to:

- 1 Engage with a variety of historical sources, including legal documents and the archives of international organisations.
- 2 Critically evaluate the links between the emergence of legal and political ideas and their historical contexts.
- 3 Critically engage and assess the historiography on the history of internationalism and humanitarianism in the modern period.

Learning Outcomes of Assessments

The assessment item list is assessed via the learning outcomes listed:

Report	3
Presentation	1	2	3
Essay	1	2	3

Outline Syllabus

In this module, students will explore the rise of internationalism as a political idea in the 'long' nineteenth century and how it influenced political movements. This will not be limited to the history of the idea alone but will also include the fascinating biographies of activists, the international networks of political movements and the establishment of international organisations, such as the League of Nations. Students will engage with a relatively new and burgeoning field of historical research that combines international and local histories and uses different theoretical approaches. It will challenge some of the established assumptions about modern history and its dominant national frameworks. The module will be delivered as a series of workshops, which will combine short lectures with group work and student-led presentations.

Learning Activities

The module will be delivered as weekly workshops. Each workshop will combine elements of lectures, small-group exercises, student-led presentations and group discussions.

Notes

Students on this module will examine key themes and debates in the history of modern internationalism. These may include the following: The Struggle Against Slavery: The First Internationalist Movement?; Global 1848: Revolutions as Transnational Events; International Solidarity? Socialism and the First and Second Internationals; Pacifism and Liberal Internationalism before 1914; A Light That Failed? Wilsonian Internationalism and the League of Nations; Communist Internationalism and Anti-Imperialism in the Interwar Years; The Other Internationalism: Conservatism and Fascism in Transnational Perspective; Lessons Learned? Internationalism and International Organisations after 1945. This module contains some off-site delivery of teaching. Students will be advised of date and location of these visits and will be expected to make arrangements where practicable. Individual circumstances will be reviewed on a case-by-case basis in order to ensure that module outcomes can be met.