After completing the module the student should be able to:

Learning Outcomes

Code	Number	Description
MLO1	1	Demonstrate, through application in design, knowledge of the social, political and economic context and appropriate theoretical concepts of urban design.
MLO2	2	Investigate, evaluate and integrate urban design strategies into a design project.
MLO3	3	Investigate, evaluate and integrate environmental design and cost control strategies into a design project.
MLO4	4	Show the ability to work both within a team and individually to produce a wide range of appropriate communication material.

Module Content

Outline Syllabus	Introduced with a concise lecture programme the module commences with a series of structured analytical and creative design tasks, delivered to students through tutorials and seminars in the form of design reviews. These tasks lead on to the main urban design group project, which is informed by an offsite workshop abroad or local alternative. The group project is also supported by tutorials and seminars. Additional individual urban design and communication tasks follow on from the group project such that the whole module effectively delivers an entire urban design process of analysis, design and communication. The module concludes with the assembly of an illustrated final report to communicate the full scope of the work undertaken in a concise and cogent fashion.
Module Overview	This module provides you with a comprehensive introduction to the theory and practice of urban design, along with historical and theoretical knowledge and a range of technical skills to enable the analysis, generation and communication of urban design projects. It aims to place urban design in a social, political and economic context with an understanding of environmental sustainability and cost/value issues.
Additional Information	Welcome to the Urban Design Project 1 module. The module commences with a series of analytical studies that lead into the main urban design group project, proposing the regeneration of an urban area. An individual urban design study follows on, such that the whole module effectively delivers an entire urban design process of analysis, design at different scales, and communication. The module concludes with the assembly of an illustrated final report to communicate the full scope of the work undertaken in a concise and cogent fashion.
