Aims This module introduces the student to the issue of intelligence sharing and cooperation. It complements Module 4 – 7210PS (Case studies in success and failure in intelligence) Effective intelligence relies on agencies and individuals who work within these organisations to systematically collect, record and then enable sharing of their intelligence either directly or by placing it within an accessible electronic data system. History reveals a long list of intelligence failure where this has not happened as efficiently and effectively as it should have done (e.g. 9/11 attacks, Soham murders and Ian Huntly and the murder of Daniel Pelka in Coventry)
