Aims and Outcomes

Aims	The module enables students to investigate in depth a topic within the field of counter-terrorism studies. Students can select their own research area, but this is subject to authorisation of the course leader. The dissertation must include independent and original research. Students will be required to submit a formal dissertation plan. Once this has been approved, students will be allocated a dissertation tutor, and for the remainder of the module, supervision of the dissertation will be conducted on an individual basis. It is expected that pertinent knowledge and skills gained in other course modules will be reflected in the dissertation.

After completing the module the student should be able to:

Learning Outcomes

Code	Number	Description
MLO1	1	Critically evaluate and process primary and secondary data within the context of specified research objectives.
MLO2	2	Critically develop a coherent and analytical argument which is related to the initial problem or hypothesis.
MLO3	3	Reflect critically on the nature and purpose of research in relation to counter terrorism, policing, security, and criminal justice.
MLO4	4	Critically link empirical data, theory generation and practice within an organised and coherent piece of writing.

Module Content

Outline Syllabus	Negotiated Work-Related learning project which includes a review of key research methods and the procedures for ethical approval from the university, if needed.
Module Overview
Additional Information	The dissertation allows the student to undertake an independent and sustained piece of research into a substantive topic of his or her own choosing. The dissertation must include appropriate extended piece of empirical or theoretical research on a topic in the counter-terrorism field.
