Outline Syllabus

This module centres on a critical examination of leadership styles and other management structures within the Lifelong learning setting, including; staff development opportunities including networking, recruitment and selection of staff, teamwork, staff support systems, change management, and effective leadership skills for the professional practitioner.

The culture of change will be researched and critically examined within the context of individual organisations. The concept between the relationship of leadership and management will remain as an underpinning theme throughout the module.

Learning Activities

Induction to module, content and processes, critical outline of the identified leadership and organisational issues. Individual tutorials and small group seminars supporting individual research. This will develop skills of reflection, criticism and develop a sense of a community of educational critical and reflective practitioners.

Notes

This module critically examines change management in relation to the concepts of leadership and organisationsl cultures within the Lifelong Learning Sector of education and training. The subsequent analysis of such concepts will be carried out from both a theoretical and practitioner view.

This module considers the impact of leadership skills in promoting effective management in a rapidly changing Lifelong Learning Sector. Such skills will be reviewed on both an insitutional and personal level, with both being underpinned by relevant theories of management and leadership.
